
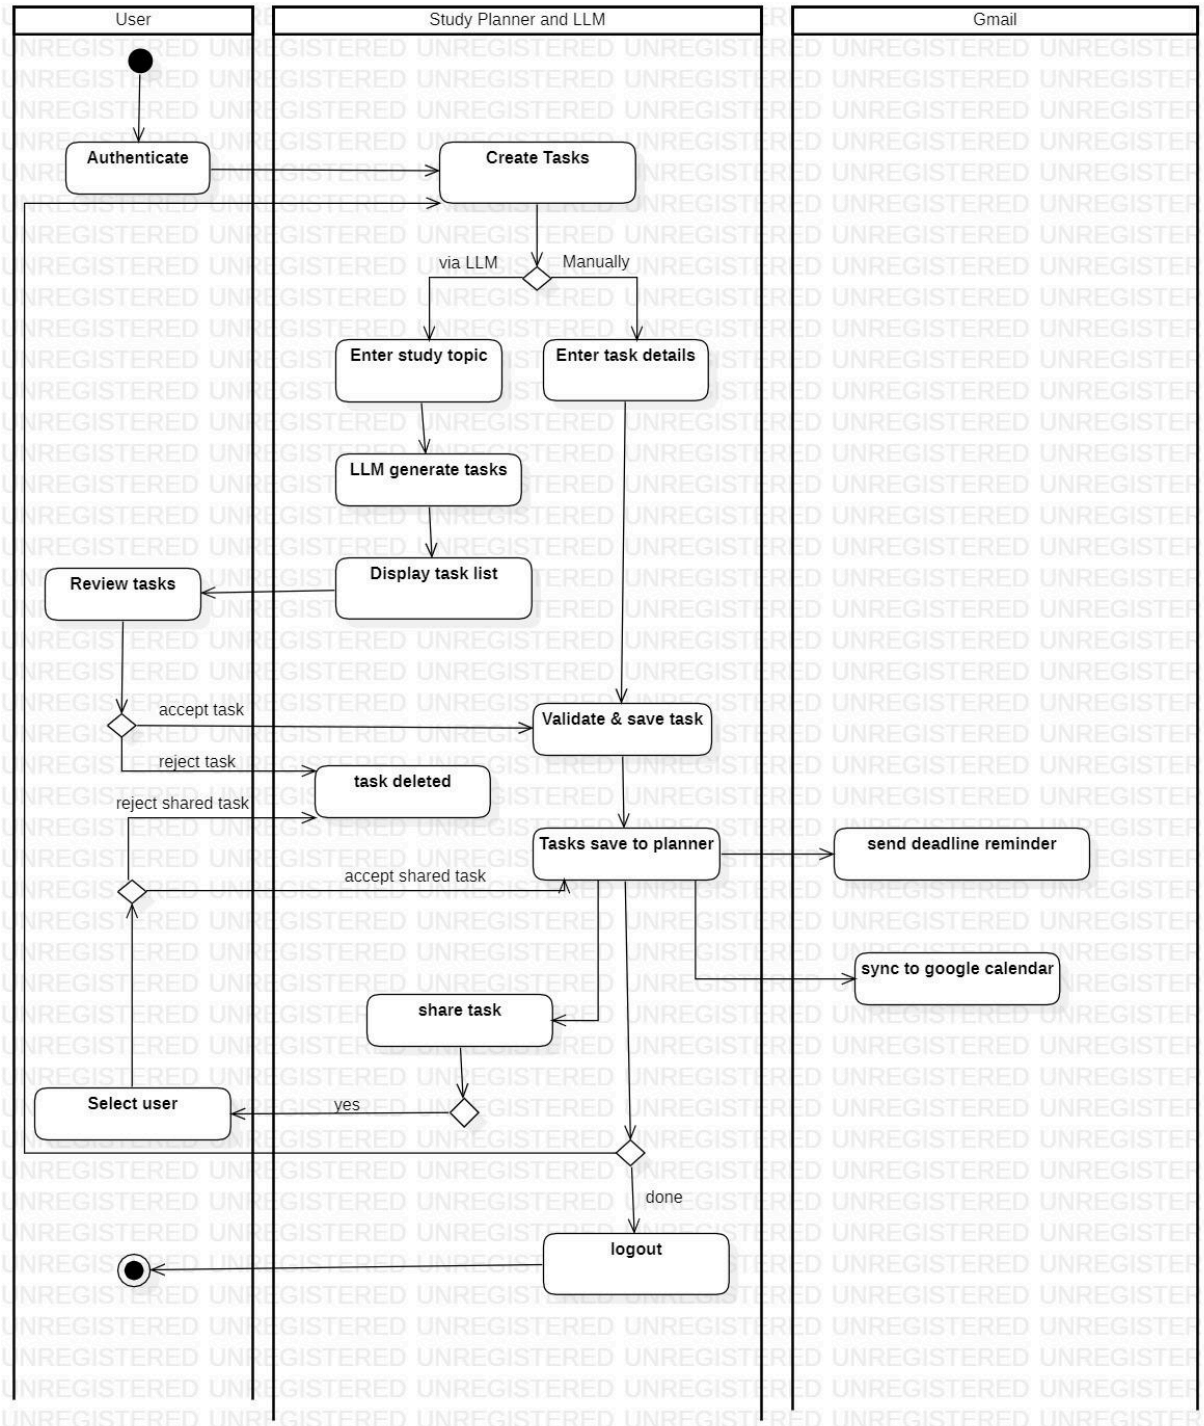
A simple activity diagram showing user interaction with our Personalized study planner app. A user can sign in using google or manual account creation and any tasks the users makes will automatically be synched with their google calendar. That is what the decision boxes are for; they are merged which is being indicated with a smaller diamond box. Text visuals are added where needed.



A bit in depth of how the core functionality actually works with prompting the LLM and making each task manually; with reminders sent via email.
